

Gaja's status as an uncompromisingly high quality Italian wine symbol has long been established, particularly by its flagship Piedmontese wine portfolio. What makes us admire Gaja more is the eponymous Angelo Gaja's ability to pass the torch on to his heirs. Gaia Gaja started working with her father since 2005 and has evolved to now be not only the true heiress to this legendary producer; but also a torchbearer in the region when it comes to dealing with the impacts of climate change in viticulture and vinification.

Today we assemble a selection of recent vintages of Gaja for we, like all loyal fans of Gaja, have solid faith in this celebrated family-owned winery. Stock up some cases for your cellar or assemble a mixed case to enjoy and witness the consistently high quality of these wines.
