The sunny, always smiling Burgundy dame Anne Gros has come a long way to become who she is today. Back in 1988 she took over winery control from her father Francois Gros. 30 years back, the winery was dwindling much like her father's health. She inherited 3 hectares of vineyards from her father, slowly convert them into organic practices and expand the domaine to now cover 6.5 hectares.

Our liking of Anne Gros' wines go beyond the absolute deliciousness, it certainly extends to our personal respect to Anne Gros, one of the greatest female winemakers in Burgundy. For the curious souls, talk to us or leave us a message and let us tell you more about a hidden gem wine handcrafted by Anne Gros and her husband Jean Tollot down south in Southern France!

For this newsletter, let us stay within the confines of Burgundy and revisit some of Anne Gros' best expressions, as well as those that are approachable and great for everyday drinking.

Everyday drinking options (Immediately available in HK)

Anne Gros Bourgogne Rouge and Bourgogne Haute Cote de Nuits were first made in mid 1990s as part of her expansion plans of the domaine. These wines are best for those who'd like to gain a basic understanding of Anne Gros quality. Anne Gros made no Premier Cru wines. It is either Grand Cru or village or regional appellations.

Anne Gros' first release of Echezeaux Grand Cru Les Loachausses was in 2007. Prior to that, this 0.76 hectare plot has been leased to Gros Frere et Soeur for 25 years. As the lease ran out, Anne Gros took it back and started making plush, velvety wines of ethereal aromatics from this particular lieux-dit site within Echezeaux Grand Cru. This is a crown jewel expression in Anne Gros portfolio.

2013 Anne Gros Echezeaux Grand Cru Les Loachausses

12 x 75cl

GBP 1,747 (Per Bottle ~HKD 1,512)

2015 Anne Gros Echezeaux Grand Cru Les Loachausses

GBP 2,148 (Per Bottle ~HKD 1,853)

For Burgundy connoisseurs, we suggest a fun comparison of Anne Gros vs Gros Frere et Soeur when it comes to their Clos de Vougeot. As much as we are suggesting that there is stylistic winemaking differences (which will be more subtle than obvious), it is more a microscopic examination of Le Grande Maupertui, considered a prime terroir the sizable Grand Cru of Clos de Vougeot that might interest Burgundy lovers. In Anne Gros' words, Le Grande Maupertui gives "impressive fullness" and the 2015 vintage "has a distinctly more floral bouquet than many others".

2008 Anne Gros Clos de Vougeot Grand Cru Le Grande Maupertui

GBP 2,948 (Per Bottle ~HKD 2,533)
