Bellavista Franciacorta Gran Cuvee Brut, 2007

Italy, Lombardy

RP 91, WS 90

Robert Parker: 'Bellavista is arguably the most important producer of sparkling wines in Italy as measured by quality. The estate's top cuvees spend anywhere from 36 to 60 months on their lees, which gives them a level of complexity and body that few, if any, Italian methode champenoise wines can match.'

Tasting Notes: 72% Chardonnay and 28% Pinot Nero. Golden Delicious apple, baked bread, honey-roasted almond and dried apricot emerge from the bouquet. The wine displays a thick, compelling style with a crisp, dry finish and a touch of crushed white pepper.

Pyramid Valley Riverbrook Vineyard Riesling 2010

Marlborough, New Zealand ~~$190~~ $170/btl

RP 91: "The 2009 Riverbrook Vineyard Marlborough Riesling gives a yeasty / savory character over intense notes of warm grapefruit, lemon tart, baking bread and marzipan. Medium-dry with crisp acid to balance, it is light bodied yet concentrated in the mouth with a nice balance of fruit and savory flavors going long into the finish."

The home vineyard has been established according to rules that Mike grew to respect and inherently to trust during his time studying and working in Burgundy: Pinot Noir and Chardonnay have been planted, on clay-limestone soils on scarp slopes, at a density of 10,000-12,000 vines per hectare. The vineyard has been biodynamically managed from inception.

Each block is planted to reflect a specific soil type hence the somewhat irregular looking blocks. In total we have only 2.2 hectares planted in 4 separate blocks. The differences you can taste reflects the soil and climatic differences between each block, which is never more than 400 metres at most. We vinify each block and variety separately but identically in a mixture of old oak and clay amphorae so the outside influences on the grape are minimised.

The blocks themselves were named by Claudia after the weed varieties predominant in each, which also reflect the different soil. The Angel Flower is a more exposed block, north facing that reflects a lightness, delicacy and an ethereal scent. The Lions Tooth with its golden dandelions and obvious lime rich soil shows a rich golden colour with a toasty sulphite nose. The Earth Smoke is a heavier clay, with a denser, wild, gamey outcome. The Field of Fire slopes away to an eastern aspect and into the heaviest clay and makes typically a green-hued delicate wine.
